Earnings reports this week:

Market update:

Ten year treasury rate at 4.596% at the time of this writing breaking over the 4.5% mark as the higher for longer narrative comes to fruition. This makes the case for continued U.S. dollar strength especially with the tailwind from turmoil in the middle east. Sustained higher interest rates and a higher dollar will put pressure on corporate margins so this needs to be watched closely. There is not much eco data this week so the focus will turn toward the speeches coming out of the FED, ECB, and BOE policy makers. Beyond that everyone will be looking for clarity regarding the developing situation between Iran and Israel. Any escalation between will be negative for markets in the near term.
