Market update:

Overall markets this week are going to be in wait and see mode until Wednesday when we have the CPI report, FOMC Rate Decision, and the Powell press conference that follows the rate decision. I don't expect Powell to say anything that would derail the markets. The central bank is already feeling pressure from around the world, as the ECB and the Bank of Canada moved to lower rates last week which has already started to put upward pressure on the dollar. If the labor market remains strong, and inflation pressures come in hot, the Fed will have a very tough time meeting the market expectations of rate cuts.
