Market update:

Last week, tech stocks and the Nasdaq led a strong market performance, with the Nasdaq rising 3.24% and the S&P 500 gaining 1.58%, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell by 0.54%. Despite Saudi Arabia opting not to renew its petrodollar agreement, the U.S. dollar strengthened. Inflation reports from last week indicated the Federal Reserve has inflation under control. Fed Chair Powell's unexpectedly hawkish stance during the press conference after the fed meeting concluded likely reflects concerns over potential inflation risks once policy easing begins, possibly this fall. Bonds remained attractive amid a flight-to-safety trend, driven by global capital seeking refuge in dollar assets.

Geopolitically, Saudi Arabia's openness to currencies other than the U.S. dollar for oil trade signals significant shifts, though current impacts appear limited. Credit spreads between corporate debt and Treasuries suggest stable liquidity, potentially bolstered by future Fed rate cuts, yet these cuts carry risks: signaling economic slowdown and potential stock market corrections. Moreover, increased money supply from rate cuts may fuel inflation, posing challenges for public readiness amidst economic recovery concerns.
